ECHO® PLANT INFORMATION SHEET

Description

Hylocereus polyrhizus X H. undatus is a hybrid variety named Makisupa Pitaya, thought to be self-fertile. It is an excellent red-fleshed fruit with a sweet, slightly astringent flavor. The fruit is attractive, medium to large in size, with short green fins around the reddish-pink surface of the fruit.

Very productive, this cultivar flowers in abundance. Its extra-large yellow-white flowers, measuring about 15cm, are irresistible to moths, bees, bats, and hummingbirds. Blooms all summer, fruit develops after flowering and ripens in fall.
